US wants to quickly deploy new missiles in Asia: US Def Secy

AFP ■ SYDNEY

Washington wants to quickly deploy new intermediate-range missiles in Asia, to counter the rise of China in the region, new US Defence Secretary Mark Esper said.

"Yes I would like to," Esper said when asked if the US was considering deploying new medium-range conventional weapons in Asia now Washington is no longer bound by the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces (INF) treaty.

"We would like to deploy a capability sooner rather than later," Esper told reporters on a plane to Sydney at the start of a week-long tour of Asia. "I would prefer months ... But these things tend to take longer than you expect." The new Pentagon chief did not specify where the US intended to deploy these weapons.

"I would not speculate because those things depend on plans, it's those things you always discuss with your allies," he said.

same rocket artillery system on Wednesday, KCNA said Kim expressed "great satisfaction" over Friday's tests, which it said confirmed the system's "altitude control level flight performance, track changing capability, accuracy of hitting a target and warhead explosion power of the guided ordnance rocket."

The report didn't include any direct mention of the United States or South Korea.

South Korea's presidential office had said the U.S. and South Korean militaries shared an assessment that Friday's launches were likely of short-range ballistic missiles.

South Korea's military had also concluded the weapons North Korea tested on Wednesday are ballistic missiles and maintained its assessment even after the North described them as a newly developed "large-caliber multiple launch guided rocket system."

South Korea's Joint Chiefs of Staff said Friday's launches were conducted at 2:59 am.

Trump invited Iran FM to White House: Report

Washington: US President Donald Trump invited Iran's foreign minister to the White House last month at the height of tensions between the two countries, a magazine reports. The invitation, extended by Senator Rand Paul with permission from the president, was turned down for now, The New Yorker reported Friday.

The minister, Mohammad Javad Zarif, said it was up to Tehran to decide on accepting it. Neither the White House nor the State Department responded to AFP requests for comment on the report, which quoted US and Iranian sources and what the magazine called a well-placed diplomat.

Zarif told the magazine he would not want a White House meeting that yielded just a photo op and a two page statement afterwards, The New Yorker said. Trump has said publicly several times that he is willing to hold talks with the Iranians even as he lambasts Tehran as a corrupt, incompetent and dangerous regime that is a threat to regional security and US interests. Police detained hundreds of protesters at an unauthorized gathering in Moscow Monday.

HONG KONG

Pro-democracy protesters in Hong Kong erected barriers in a popular tourist district and briefly blocked a major tunnel on Saturday evening, defying increasingly stern warnings from China to quell the "intolerable" unrest.

Authorities in Hong Kong hardened stance, including the arrests of dozens of protesters, and the Chinese military saying it was ready to requested.

But protesters have remained unyielding, vowing to hold multiple occupations and rallies into next week, causing tensions soaring once more. On Saturday they breached their mantra "be water" — a philosophy of unpredictability espoused by local martial arts legend Bruce Lee — in a bid to keep police guessing.

Throughout the evening they put up makeshift barriers across multiple roads in the area, a popular shopping and tourist district on the waterfront, where many luxury malls and hotels shut their doors and tourists fled.

Protesters burned a flag and graffiti thrown up to join a protest.
